Nabers to offer insights on public-private partnerships at conference

NY gathering to feature some of nation's top experts on innovations driving U.S. economy

AUSTIN, TX (2-22-16) – Mary Scott Nabers, president and CEO of Strategic Partnerships, Inc. and co-founder of the Gemini Global Group, will be among an impressive group of economic innovation experts to address the Friday, April 29, Westchester: County of Tomorrow conference in West Harrison, New York.

Nabers is a recognized expert on public-private partnerships (P3s) and author of Collaboration Nation – How Public-Private Ventures Are Revolutionizing the Business of Government.

The conference will assemble some of the nation's top experts regarding P3s, infrastructure, transit-oriented development and innovative eco-systems. These and other advances in economic development in government environments are driving today's economy. The experts will share their expertise and experiences through presentations, panel discussions and networking opportunities in an effort to show what these and other innovations can mean for Westchester County and the region.

"Most government entities are facing difficult decisions on how to spend their declining revenues to meet the needs of their growing constituencies," said Nabers, "This conference allows government officials to explore some new and innovative options available to them. Public-private partnerships are becoming a bigger part of that equation."

The conference will also features opportunities for meeting with private investors, technology experts and design firm representatives who have assisted with economic development programs in cities such as Philadelphia, Raleigh and New York City.
